Lewis Carroll

Lewis Carroll was the pen-name of Charles Dodgson, an English writer and the author of two of the best loved children's books in English Literature – 'Alice's Adventures in Wonderland' and 'Through the Looking Glass'. The characters and phrases from these books have entered and become part of the English culture so, if someone calls you 'Mad as a Hatter', you know whom to thank.

Charles Dodgson was born on 27 January 1832 and spent the first eleven years of his life at Warrington, Cheshire where his father was the priest. His family was large: his parents had 11 children, 4 boys and 7 girls.

Charles's father was a very good mathematician. Before his marriage he was a lecturer at Oxford. Naturally, education for the children was a priority in the family. Charles was taught at home, then he studied at two boarding schools, and finally at Christ Church College, Oxford. Later in life, he remembered his boarding school experience without any warm feelings. Still, he was an excellent student and studied very well in all his subjects.

Charles Dodgson was talented in many ways. He was interested in photography and music. He sang very well, played chess and enjoyed creating and solving puzzles.

He was also Professor at Oxford and a well-known logician.

In 1855 Charles Dodgson became a lecturer in Mathematics at Christ Church College. It was then that he started his literary career and took his pen-name, Lewis Carroll. While his creative books and poetry were published under his pen-name, he also wrote books on Mathematics under his own name.

When a new Headmaster arrived at Christ Church College, he brought with him his family. Dodgson became the family's close friend. Charles Dodgson had never been married and had neither a son nor a daughter. But he loved and understood children very well. The Headmaster's little daughters, the youngest of which was called Alice, enjoyed his company very much. Charles often entertained the girls by telling them stories about imaginary worlds with fantastic creatures.

The story about the adventures of little Alice became popular all over the world. 'Alice in Wonderland' is primarily a children's story, but adults have enjoyed the novel for over a century together with children.

Now we are ready to start.

Dan:	Good afternoon, Mrs. Bridge. You asked me to come after classes.
Mrs. Bridge:	Hi, Dan. That's right. I just want to congratulate you on completing the course so successfully. The final tests say you are top of the class.
Dan:	Thank you, Mrs. Bridge. It's very kind of you to say this.
Mrs. Bridge:	You've deserved it. And I would like to ask you some questions to find out how our students feel about the course and the school.
Dan:	Yes?
Mrs. Bridge:	You've been with us for four weeks. Are you happy with your living conditions?
Dan:	Yes, first I wanted to stay with a host family, but when I came to the school our supervisor said that there was a vacant room in the hostel. My friend and I decided to have a look at it, and... we liked it very much. It's also very convenient - the hostel is just by the school, so I can sleep a bit longer in the morning.
Mrs. Bridge:	I see. And do you cook for yourself in the kitchen there or do you have meals somewhere in the campus or in the city?
Dan:	I usually cook for myself. I can do it quite well, my mum has taught me. And the nearest supermarket always offers fresh vegetables, meat and fruit, so cooking is not a problem. Eating out in the city is too expensive...
Mrs. Bridge:	And the campus cafeteria? They offer really good discounts there if you have your student card on you.
Dan:	Yes, I know... but I don't really like the food there. It seems to me too dull and tasteless...
Mrs. Bridge:	I see.
Dan:	But I use the student card for watching films and for the local sports centre.
Mrs. Bridge:	By watching films you mean going to the Cinema Hall down the Mall Street?
Dan:	Yes. There's always something interesting on. I usually buy early Saturday and Sunday tickets with a student discount and watch the coolest Hollywood action films really cheap.
Mrs. Bridge:	Do you like action?

Bridge:
Dan:	Well... If I'm choosing between cartoons, melodramas and action films, yes, I choose the action films.
Mrs. Bridge:	Ok. And you also mentioned the sports centre. How often do you go there?
Dan:	Not very often – once or twice a week I go to the swimming pool. There's also a well-equipped gym there... I would like to use it, but there's no time for that unfortunately.
Mrs. Bridge:	Yes, you were busy with the course, and the cultural programme was pretty packed. Did you enjoy the excursions you went on with your class?
Dan:	Yes, I did.
Mrs. Bridge:	And there's the farewell party tomorrow in the school. Are you coming?
Dan:	I'd love to but I can't. I'm flying home tomorrow afternoon.
Mrs. Bridge:	Oh, that's a real pity!
Dan:	I know. But nothing can be done – I have to go... for family reasons. I'll be missing school and my new friends.
